Story Ideas? What has this seagull seen?

As for Ghana...

The best thanks I can receive, is the validation that my work and contribution of hours of thought have been appreciated.

In the case of my Ghana book, Headmaster Samuel wrote me to tell me:

“Hello Ann,
I am Samuel, the headmaster of Acts 2 Collective school. Our children in class one used the books you donated to us for the first term and they were awesomely in love with the book. God bless you for all what you do!!!!”

That is all I need. My heart was so full when I read his message that I wept. Remember the “new school” photo I posted last month?

I have new photos already! Check out the progress as of this newsletter!

Samuel also told me that he has begun to teach the girls in the Women's Center English Classes. I'm so excited! He has asked me to search for some phonics books, as some of the girls do not read and write at all. I'm glad to do all that I can for these people to become more independent. That's what they want. And education is a fundamental step in any subject or philosophy.

Activities Happening

At the current time, my books in an Extended Open House in Fort Dodge, Iowa sponsored by Blanden Art Museum. They will be displayed from Nov 6 to December 8 and are for sale on consignment. There is an allowance that my Ghana books will not be charged a fee, as all proceeds go to Acts2Collective for education needs. There is also a silent auction for donated books. I donated a copy of my Ghana book with information about the mission in Ghana. Blanden was interested in the story!

Next Event!

Saturday, November 17 at Erickson Library in Boone, Iowa! There will be an Author Fest in a community that has a large Latino population. I hope people are receptive.

MAINE?

What is in Maine? Everywhere an author goes is ripe for stories. I was treated to a trip to Maine by my son Mikel (yes, THAT Mikel) and his wife Nikki. I was overwhelmed. I had never been to Maine, and it was still during fall foliage, lobster season, and I saw my first awesome lighthouses. I've had a bond with lighthouses since I don't know when, when I visited my first one, and I had fun with my camera! At the first lighthouse, Mikel told Me, "Mom, you can even touch it!". May sound silly to some, but I not only touched it. I laid my palm on it and could feel the strength, the stories, the light all pass through me like a scy-fi effect. After that I embraced each one that was not roped off. Such beacons of hope and trust!
